Plan Overview

Where can I go for a quick overview of the Employee Share Purchase Plan (ESPP)?
Download the ESPP guidebook to understand the benefits of the ESPP, a key part of your Total Rewards.

Where can I ask questions about the ESPP?
Please log your question on Accenture Support. Choose "Ask a Question," then "HR," then the category of "Total Rewards & Benefits" and the subcategory "myHoldings – ESPP/VEIP/RSUs/ etc."

Avanade employees can submit an inquiry via Avanade Support Pay & Benefits.

How does the plan work?
Through the ESPP, eligible employees contribute a portion of their compensation toward the purchase of Accenture plc Class A ordinary shares. The plan runs on six-month cycles called "offering periods." Before each offering period, there is a four-week enrollment period. Enrolled participants make contributions (typically through payroll deductions) during the offering period. At the end of the offering period, the accumulated contributions are used to purchase shares.

Who is eligible to participate in the ESPP?
In general, all regular employees, fixed-term, apprentice up through Associate Director/Avanade Director, in Accenture companies that participate in the ESPP are eligible. Eligible employees are identified in Workday by an Employee Type of: Regular, Regular – Client Contract, Regular – Pace, Fixed-Term, Apprentice. Certain Accenture companies do not participate in the ESPP or are located in countries where participation is not legally permissible. Employees promoted to Accenture Leadership/Avanade Executive are not eligible to participate in the ESPP as of the time of their promotion. If enrolled, they are automatically withdrawn as of their promotion date and contributions from the current offering period are refunded to them via payroll as soon as practicable.

If I am eligible, do I have to participate in the ESPP?
No. Participation is optional.

I just joined the company. Can I sign up for the ESPP?
If you begin your employment during an enrollment period, you can enroll in the program right away! If you want to enroll but have not yet received your enterprise ID and password, please contact your Onboarding or Recruiting representative for help enrolling.

If your start date does not fall during an enrollment period, you will need to wait for the next enrollment period. Watch your email for enrollment announcements.

How much can I contribute to the ESPP?

Subject to limits established by the Compensation, Culture & People Committee, you may contribute up to 10 percent of your eligible cash compensation to the ESPP. The amount you contribute is generally based on your gross cash compensation earnings, but contributions are made from your net pay after taxes and other deductions each pay period.

What are the general tax implications of plan participation?

The best resource for equity tax information is the Country Specific Tax Information section on the Resources page of myHoldings. Generally speaking, tax is due in many countries both when you buy and sell shares through the ESPP. When the shares are purchased, the tax due is typically calculated on the difference between the discounted price and the actual share value on the purchase date. Where local country law requires tax withholding, and where legally permissible, you may have a choice of either payroll or share withholding. If and when you need to choose a tax withholding method, you will receive and see an alert in the Actions & Elections section of the myHoldings Dashboard.

How much will shares cost?

The price you pay for shares is the fair market value on the last day of the offering period, discounted by 15 percent.

How do I actually receive my shares?

Shares are purchased at the end of the offering period using your accumulated contributions. The purchase date is usually the last day of the six-month offering period. Your shares are deposited a few days after purchase into a brokerage account established for you by Accenture.

Where does Accenture obtain the shares that employees purchase through the ESPP?

Shares you purchase through the ESPP are sourced from a reserve established by Accenture, previously approved by shareholders specifically for the plan. The shares issued under the plan from this reserve may be either newly issued shares or treasury shares (that is, shares purchased by Accenture and held in treasury).

Is there a limit on the number of shares I can purchase through the ESPP?

You can contribute up to a maximum of US $7,500 from your paycheck to the ESPP in each six-month offering period. In the United States, deductions will stop after you have contributed US $7,500. In all other countries, due to currency conversions, contributions above the US $7,500 limit may be stopped after reaching approximately US $7,500 and any excess will be refunded to you at the end of each six-month offering period by your payroll. In general, this affects a relatively small number of employees participating in the Employee Share Purchase Plan.

Below is an example of how the US $7,500 limit would have applied during the November 2 – May 1 offering period for an employee with cash compensation of US $160,000. Please note that this example is based on the assumptions listed and is not intended to predict actual share prices.

Assumptions - November 2 - May 1 - offering period example
All currency amounts are US Dollars.

Fair market value, May 1* (Last trading day of offering period)	$330.00
Purchase price ($330.00 x 0.85)	$280.50
Employee's eligible annual cash compensation	$160,000
Employee's eligible cash compensation per offering period ($160,000/12 months in a year x 6 months in an offering period)	$80,000
Contribution percentage	10%
Total contributions in offering period (10% x $80,000)	$8,000

Application of US$7,500 contribution limit per offering period

Total eligible contributions (amount used to purchase shares)	$7,500
Excess contributions to be refunded ($8,000 total contributions based on contribution percentage - $7,500 contribution limit)	$500
Shares purchased calculation ($7,500/$280.50)	26.7379 shares
Shares deposited in brokerage account (assuming tax withholding through payroll)	26 shares
Refund of fractional share value through payroll (.7379 x $330.00)	$243.50

*If the first or last day of the offering period falls on the day when the New York Stock Exchange is closed, the fair market value on the preceding trading day will be used.

Enrolling in the Plan

How do I enroll in the ESPP?

You may only enroll during a designated enrollment period. To do so, log on to myHoldings, and select "ESPP Enrollment Open" in the "Actions & Elections" box. This link will bring up the Enrollment Period section. On this page, select a contribution percentage from 1 to 10 percent and click "Enroll."

How do I confirm that I am enrolled in the plan?

Your enrollment status on myHoldings will update automatically when you enroll. Also, within one hour of enrolling via myHoldings, employees without email restrictions will receive a confirmation email. If you do not receive a confirmation email within one hour, log on to myHoldings to check if your enrollment status shows "Enrolled" in the "Actions & Elections" box and check if you can see your elected contribution rate.

- If you see that your status is "Enrolled" and your contribution rate is accurate, no further action is required.
- If you see that your status is "Enrolled" but your contribution rate is inaccurate, click "Withdraw" and repeat the steps above from "How do I enroll in the Employee Purchase Plan?" where you can select your contribution rate and submit your updates.
- If you see that your status is "Not Enrolled," repeat the steps above from "How do I enroll in the Employee Purchase Plan?" where you can select your contribution rate and submit your enrollment.

Do I need to re-enroll in the ESPP for each offering period?

No, once enrolled, you will be automatically re-enrolled in subsequent offering periods at the same contribution percentage unless you withdraw or your enrollment status changes to On Hold (see What happens if I transfer to another country? and What happens if I transfer to another Accenture entity within the same country?). If you wish to re-enroll after you withdraw or transfer, or if you wish to change your contribution percentage, you must do so during a designated enrollment period.

Withdrawing from the ESPP

How do I withdraw from the plan DURING the current offering period?

You can withdraw any time up until the fifteenth of the month prior to the end of the offering period. If you withdraw, contributions will cease and the contributions you have made since the beginning of the offering period will be refunded to you through your regular pay (generally, without interest). Processing of a withdrawal request and the subsequent refund may take more than one pay period due to payroll administrative processes.

To withdraw from the program, log on to myHoldings and in the "Actions & Elections" box, click "Withdraw." Next, click the box next to the relevant offering period and then click "Withdraw" again.

Within one hour of withdrawing, employees without email restrictions will receive a confirmation email. If you do not receive a confirmation within one hour, please log on to myHoldings to check if your enrollment status shows "Withdrawn."

- If you see that your status is "Withdrawn," no further action is required.
- If you see that your status is "Enrolled," click "Withdraw," select the offering period, and then click "Withdraw" again.

How do I withdraw from the NEXT offering period?

If you want to withdraw from the next offering period, log on to myHoldings, select "ESPP Enrollment Open" in the "Actions & Elections" box and select "Withdraw." Then click the box next to the relevant offering period you would like to withdraw from and click "Withdraw."

Within one hour of withdrawing, employees without email restrictions will receive a confirmation email. If you do not receive a confirmation within one hour, please log to myHoldings to check if your enrollment status shows "Withdrawn."

- If you see that your status is "Withdrawn," no further action is required.
- If you see that your status is "Enrolled," click "Withdraw," select the offering period, and click the "Withdraw" button.

Note: During the enrollment window two offering periods will be listed. It is critical that you use caution in selecting the correct offering period you wish to withdraw from. Once withdrawn from the current offering period you cannot be re-enrolled. If you wish to stop participating in ESPP you need to withdraw from both offering periods.

What happens after I withdraw from the ESPP?

After you withdraw from the ESPP, your payroll team will be informed about your withdrawal within 7 business days from the date of your withdrawal. Contributions you have made since the beginning of the offering period will be refunded to you by your payroll through your regular pay (generally, without interest). Processing of a withdrawal request and the subsequent refund may take more than one pay period due to payroll administrative processes.

Contributions and Purchases

Why doesn't my account on myHoldings show my shares increasing as I'm making contributions to the plan?

The ESPP runs on six-month offering periods. Your contributions are accumulated by your payroll team during each offering period. At the end of the offering period your payroll team will transfer your contributions to the Equity team and shares will be purchased on your behalf. Shares are visible on myHoldings only after the purchase activities are completed.

How can I find out how much I've contributed to the plan?

Depending upon your country of employment, your accumulated contributions may appear on your pay or earnings statement. Alternatively, you can contact your payroll representative.

Can I adjust my contributions during the offering period?

No, you may only change your contribution percentage for the next offering period during an open enrollment period.

How is the discounted purchase price for the shares determined?

The discounted purchase price is 15 percent less than the fair market value on the last day of an offering period.

What happens if the purchase calculation results in a fractional share?

After the end of each six-month offering period, shares are purchased with your accumulated contributions. The number of shares purchased is calculated up to the fourth decimal. However, only whole shares will be delivered to your brokerage account. Any fractional share remaining after the purchase calculation and/or share withholding will be paid out to you in cash through your local payroll. The amount of the payment will be based on the purchase date fair market value, as determined by the plan, times the fractional share, and, for most countries, will be converted to your local currency based on the purchase date currency exchange rate.

The table below depicts an example of a fractional share refund for an employee with annual compensation of US $120,000 and a 10 percent contribution rate.

Fractional share example
All currency amounts are in US Dollars.

Last day* of offering period fair market value	$330.00
Purchase price ($330.00 x 0.85)	$280.50
Employee's eligible annual cash compensation	$120,000
Employee's eligible cash compensation per offering period ($120,000/12 months in a year x 6 months in an offering period)	$60,000
Contribution percentage	10%
Total contributions in offering period (10% x $60,000)	$6,000
Shares purchase calculation ($6,000 / $280.50)	21.3903 shares
Shares deposited in brokerage account (assuming tax withholding through payroll)	21
Refund of fractional share value through payroll (.3903x $330.00)	$128.80

*If the first or last day of the offering period falls on the day when the New York Stock Exchange is closed, the fair market value on the preceding trading day will be used.

What if my contributions were not enough to purchase shares?

If your total contribution amount for the offering period was less than the value of a whole share on the purchase date, you will only be able to purchase a fraction of a share. As we only deliver whole shares to the broker (see fractional share item above) the value of the fractional share you would have purchased is paid out to you through your normal payroll. Please note that you still benefit from participating in the ESPP in this scenario, because you are credited for the purchase of a fractional share at the 15% discount. The gain on the purchase is yours, and the payment you receive is based on the fair market value (full value) instead of the discounted purchase price. Generally, this payment will be processed by your payroll within one or two pay periods after the purchase date.

Employment Changes

What happens if my employment terminates?

If your employment terminates before the end of an offering period, your contributions for that offering period will be refunded to you through your local payroll (generally, without interest). Any shares you have purchased in previous offering periods will remain in your brokerage account. Your relationship with the broker will not be affected. Please review the Departure Considerations FAQ for employees below leader, in the FAQ section of the myHoldings Resources page.

What happens if I transfer to another country?

If you transfer to another country during the current offering period, your enrollment status for the current offering period will change from Enrolled to On Hold. Participants with an On-Hold status will stop contributing to the ESPP upon transfer to the new country but retain the right to purchase shares with contributions accumulated before the transfer, subject to applicable local laws in the new country. If you have not withdrawn from the ESPP but your contributions are refunded upon transfer, please contact your payroll department immediately.

In addition, you may withdraw from the current offering period at any time up until the fifteenth of the month prior to the end of the offering period. To withdraw from the program, log on to myHoldings and in the "Actions & Elections" box, select "Withdraw." Then click on the box next to the relevant offering period you would like to withdraw from and click "Withdraw" again. You will see a confirmation message next to the button when the withdraw election is complete. Processing of a withdrawal request and the subsequent refund may take more than one pay period due to payroll administrative processes.

Provided that your employer in the new country is an eligible entity, you may re-enroll in the ESPP in the new country when enrollment begins for the next offering period. To participate in such offering period, you must enroll via myHoldings during the next ESPP enrollment period.

What happens if I transfer to another Accenture entity within the same country?

If you transfer to another Accenture entity within the same country, your enrollment status in most instances will not be affected and your participation will continue at the same contribution percentage. In rare circumstances, transfer to a newly established entity that has not yet been approved for the ESPP will result in your enrollment being placed On Hold as described above.

Tax Withholding

The best resource for equity tax information is the Country Specific Tax Information section on the Resources page of myHoldings. The following questions and answers apply only in countries where tax withholding is required at the time of share purchase. These countries currently include:

Andorra	Egypt	Latvia	Romania
Argentina	Finland	Lithuania	Slovakia
Austria	France	Luxembourg	South Africa
Belgium	Germany	Malaysia	Spain
Brazil	India	Mauritius	Sweden
Bulgaria	Indonesia	Mexico	Switzerland
Canada	Ireland	Netherlands	Thailand
Chile	Israel	Norway	Turkey
China	Israel	Peru	United Kingdom
Colombia	Japan	Philippines	United States
Costa Rica	Kuwait	Puerto Rico

Why do we owe taxes at the time of the share purchase?

In many countries, the difference between the fair market value of the shares on the purchase date and the discounted purchase price is considered taxable income. As a result, taxes may be due at purchase.

How will taxes be withheld?

Taxes may be withheld using one of two methods:

1. Payroll withholding, in which taxes are withheld from your salary and
2. Share withholding, in which taxes are withheld by withholding a portion of the shares purchased.

When will I be able to choose the type of withholding method?

The tax election window runs during the same time as open enrollment window. The tax election will apply to the next available purchase.

Will I be able to choose the type of withholding?

In most countries, employees can choose between payroll withholding and share withholding, but only payroll withholding is offered due to local legal regulations in the following countries: China, Finland, Philippines, Romania, and South Africa.

How do I choose a type of tax withholding?

• If you are located in a country in which a choice of tax payment methods is offered, you will be able to make that choice via myHoldings during the open enrollment window. In addition, if you do not make a selection, the default selection will be applied. In all countries where share withholding is offered, except Argentina, Germany, Japan, Malaysia and Norway, that default is Payroll withholding.

- If you are located in a country in which a choice of tax payment methods is not offered or lif you do not see the alert, you are not offered a choice of tax withholding method and have no action to take.

Why is share withholding the most common default withholding method?

The share withholding method does not require additional cash outlay on the part of the participant. In addition, the share withholding process avoids brokerage fees and other costs for the participant.

Why isn't share withholding offered to everyone?

The difference in the choices available to employees in different countries is due to local legal requirements. Share withholding is not allowed in all countries, and in some countries where it is permitted, it is not legally permissible for share withholding to be set as the default method.

Even if share withholding is available to me, why shouldn't I just go with payroll withholding and sell my shares if I need to?

This is possible, although you will be required to pay a transaction fee and commission to the broker for the sale.

Will my selection of a withholding method affect the delivery of my shares?

With either withholding method, your shares will be delivered as soon as practicable after purchase. Your choice of withholding method has no effect on share delivery.

What if my estimated taxes were higher than my actual taxes due?

The initial number of shares withheld is based on estimated tax withholding. Actual tax liability is calculated by the payroll system in your country. Adjustments to the tax amount will be made as necessary and the excess of tax withholding will be paid to you via cash by your payroll

What if my estimated taxes were less than the amount of taxes I actually owed?

Any additional taxes due will be deducted from your pay. When actual tax liability is calculated by the payroll system in your country, adjustments will be made as necessary. When this happens, you may notice a difference between the tax withholding information on myHoldings and your earnings statement. Your earnings statement indicates the correct amount of taxes.

If I select share withholding, what share price will be used to determine the number of shares withheld?

The fair market value on the purchase date will be used to determine the number of shares required to be withheld. That is also the value that is used to calculate your tax liability. In most countries, the tax due is calculated on the difference between the fair market value at the time of purchase and the discounted price at which the shares are purchased.

Are there any transaction costs related to either share withholding or payroll withholding?

No, there are no transaction costs to employees for share withholding or payroll withholding.

What happens if the share price changes between the time the initial shares are deposited, and any adjustment (for over- or under-estimated withholding) is corrected?

The number of additional shares deposited into your account for adjustment will be based on the fair market value of Accenture shares on the purchase date.

Do I need to select a tax withholding method for every offering period?

You may need to select a tax withholding method, depending on your country of employment. Your selection of a tax withholding method cannot be carried over from one period to the next. If you do not select a withholding method for any particular offering period, the default method for your country will be applied.

Where can I find additional tax information?

Information to help you better understand the tax consequences of purchasing shares through the ESPP is available on myHoldings.

For tax information specific to your country, go to the myHoldings Resources page. Select "Country Specific Tax Information," and then select your country from the dropdown box. Click the links to the Tax Guides that appear in this section.

In addition to these resources, you may also want to consult with your personal financial and/or tax advisor.

What additional tax considerations apply to PRC Nationals in China?

Taxes resulting from sale of shares and/or payment of dividends are your responsibility. Neither Accenture nor our affiliated broker (UBS Financial Services) will withhold local taxes upon the sale of shares or the payment of cash dividends. Other non-local taxes may be withheld by the broker, including:

- 28 percent US back-up withholding taxes on share sales or dividends where a US tax form (W-8BEN) is not on file, and/or
- 25 percent Irish withholding tax on cash dividends.

Managing your Shares

How do I receive my shares?

Shares are purchased at the end of the offering period using the accumulated contributions you have made. The purchase date is the last date of the six-month offering period. Your shares are deposited into a brokerage account established for you by Accenture at UBS Financial Services. The share deposit is performed a few days after purchase.

Why can't my shares be made available for sale immediately following purchase?

The purchase and deposit of your shares is a complex process involving teams in the United States and Manila working with individual payroll groups in all countries where the ESPP is offered, as well as our outside brokerage firms. In addition, it may also help to remember that:

- The timing of the end of an offering period can affect delivery.
- The primary purpose of the ESPP is to provide employees with a way to build long-term equity ownership in Accenture.

What restrictions apply on when I can sell my shares?

All sales and transfers of Accenture shares by employees, including the shares acquired through the ESPP, are subject to Policy 1216, Buying and Selling Securities - Insider Trading. Employees may not sell Accenture shares at any time they are aware of information that may be material, nonpublic information about Accenture or its shares, and, additionally, Managing Directors and other employees subject to trading window restrictions may not sell Accenture shares except during open trading windows.

Employees are also prohibited from entering into any hedging transactions with respect to any Accenture shares they hold, including shares acquired through the ESPP (see Policy 1216, Buying and Selling Securities - Insider Trading, for more details).

What exchange rate(s) will be used to calculate the value of our contributions to the ESPP and the number of shares we will purchase?

Unless otherwise required by local law, the exchange rates used are the closing rates on the last business day of the offering period, as reported by Standard & Poor's Comstock. These rates are available on myHoldings. Select "Reports" on the top navigation. Then select Exchange Rate History from the drop-down menu.

How will I know when my shares have been deposited into my account?

You will receive a confirmation by mail that the shares have been deposited. In addition, you may also check the UBS website. If you have not activated your UBS One Source account, follow instructions on the UBS online portal and see the UBS job aid for more details.

Do I need to do anything with my shares?

No, once the shares are deposited into your brokerage account, you may either hold, sell, or transfer them to another broker. The decision is entirely yours. Due to US securities laws requirements, however, you cannot place an order to sell shares until they have been deposited into your account.

How do I sell my shares?

If you want to sell all or any portion of your shares, you must place a trade order with the broker (UBS Financial Services).

Trade orders may be placed online or by calling a UBS Financial Services call center after shares are posted to your account. You will need to be prepared to select a type of sell order and method of delivery for the proceeds of the sale. Also see the Brokerage Account FAQs below. As a reminder, all sales of your shares must comply with our policies on share transactions, including Policy 1216, Buying and Selling Securities – Insider Trading.

The following applies to PRC National participants in China only:
You are required to repatriate any proceeds from share sales and cash dividends into China. Our broker will forward your proceeds to the Accenture team in China as soon as practicable after your sale. Delivery could be delayed if Accenture is unable to secure or maintain all necessary approvals, as determined by Accenture in its sole discretion. Accenture will coordinate the delivery of cash proceeds to you as soon as practicable upon receipt of funds from the broker. Your proceeds will be converted from US dollars (USD) to CNY using the official rates as determined by HSBC on the date of payment. These CNY proceeds will generally be deposited to your China Merchant Bank account within 1 to 2 monthly pay cycles after UBS Financial Services completes your trade order.

You will not receive any interest for funds held between the settlement of your sales transaction and/or cash dividend payment and such time as the sale proceeds or cash dividends are delivered to your China Merchant Bank account.

Can I transfer my shares to a different broker?

In all countries except China, you may transfer your shares from your Accenture sponsored brokerage account to another personal brokerage account at any time, although you are welcome to continue to hold your shares with UBS Financial Services. Accenture Leaders (Managing Directors) should be mindful of Trading Window restrictions and Equity Ownership Requirements prior to any share transfers.

In China, transferring shares to another brokerage account is not permitted due to local legal restrictions.

If I sell my shares, how long does it take to receive my proceeds?

Proceeds should generally be available for delivery after the third business day following the share sale. You can direct the proceeds to be either mailed or wire-transferred to you. Delivery via wire transfer is typically the fastest and the safest delivery method. If you receive a check drawn on a US bank, your local bank may take longer to process the check.

For participants in China, please see above ("how do I sell my shares?").

Will my sale proceeds be in US dollars?

Unless otherwise specified at the time you place your trade order, the proceeds from your sale will be delivered in US dollars. You may request delivery in a different currency for an additional fee. In making this decision, you should evaluate available exchange rates and the associated fees both within the US and locally.

Where do I find a detailed accounting of my current holdings obtained through the ESPP?

After you log on to myHoldings, select "Click to View Equity Details" and expand the "ESPP Purchase Details" section. Select any of your purchases to view additional information.

Why is there a difference between the data shown on myHoldings and the data shown on the UBS website?

Any differences you see — in number of shares, purchase price, cost basis — are due to one of three factors:

- System time lag. UBS Financial Services and Accenture share plan systems exchange data on a regular basis. You may, however, occasionally see differences because of the lag between the data exchange and posting to the respective websites. Before logging any issues on Accenture Support, please wait 48 hours and check the sites to see if updates have been made.

- System design. In some cases, the broker's website is not able to accurately reflect data due to the particular structure of Accenture share plans. For example, the basis price for shares purchased and/or the purchase date may not be accurately displayed on the broker's site.

- Dividend reinvestment. UBS Financial Services handles cash dividends in the traditional manner with the default payment method being cash deposited into your UBS Financial Services account. You may request a distribution of your cash to your personal bank account at any time. You can enroll in dividend reinvestment by contacting UBS directly. UBS Financial Services does not purchase fractional shares. Therefore, remaining funds not used to purchase additional shares will be deposited into your UBS account.

Why do some equity materials include references to links or tools (such as brokerage account tools) that I cannot find on myHoldings?

The myHoldings website is a global resource covering Accenture share plans on a global basis. Occasionally, you may see references that are not applicable to you. For example, if you do not yet own any shares, you may not see a link to a UBS Financial Services brokerage account. This is because accounts are only established when shares are purchased.

What additional restrictions are in place for PRC National participants in China?

To ensure Accenture's and your compliance with PRC State Administration of Foreign Exchange ("SAFE") requirements, the following restrictions apply for local PRC national participants in China:

- Your Accenture shares must remain at your company-sponsored brokerage account at UBS Financial Services, or any successor or other third party that Accenture may engage to assist with administration of the ESPP; transferring shares to another brokerage account is not allowed.

- Participation in the ESPP is subject to Accenture obtaining all necessary approvals from the SAFE and any other applicable government entities in the PRC to permit the operation of the ESPP in China. If Accenture is unable to secure or maintain all necessary approvals, as determined by Accenture in its sole discretion, Accenture may take any action Accenture deems necessary in order to comply with applicable law, including but not limited to, suspending or terminating your payroll deductions, refunding (without interest, unless otherwise required by applicable law) your payroll deductions, or holding your payroll deductions which have not already been used to purchase shares until all necessary approvals are obtained.

- Upon the termination of your employment, due to exchange control restrictions, all shares acquired through the Employee Share Purchase Program should be sold within six months of your termination date. You may not continue to hold Accenture shares beyond this time, and Accenture reserves the right to implement a forced sale.

Brokerage Account

How is a brokerage account established?

For your participation in the ESPP, Accenture works directly with UBS Financial Services (or any successor or other third party that Accenture may engage to assist with administration of the ESPP) to establish an account in your name. Your brokerage account will be established within a few weeks of the new the offering period when you first enroll in the program. When the account is established, you will receive an eWelcome email from UBS Financial Services to activate your new account. The account established on your behalf is a limited purpose account that can be used for Accenture share transactions. Accenture emails participants in advance of any new account activation request from our broker. This is to help you identify broker communication as a valid outreach (not SPAM/phishing).

What will I receive from UBS and what will I need to do?

UBS Financial Services will send you an e-mail from noreply@ubs.com with instructions for registering your brokerage account and completing your tax documentation.

Completing your W-9 or W-8BEN form, as applicable, helps you avoid unnecessary back-up tax withholding when you sell your shares or receive a dividend payment on your shares. These are US government tax forms, and all Accenture share plan participants must complete one of the forms. UBS Financial Services must have the appropriate form on file so that taxes are not withheld from any share sales you make.

- If you are a citizen of any country other than the United States, you must complete the W-8BEN form. Without this form, taxes could be withheld requiring you to file a US tax return in order to receive a refund. You can avoid this issue by simply completing the W-8BEN form as instructed on the UBS website. A current W-8BEN form must be on file at all times. A W-8BEN form is considered current for the calendar year it was filed and for the following three years. For example, a W-8BEN form filed in April 2022 would be considered current until December 31, 2025. After December 31, 2025, a new W-8BEN would need to be filed.
- Please note that as of January 1, 2018, the US Internal Revenue Service (IRS) requires that the Form W-8BEN include your tax identifying number (TIN). Otherwise, the form will not be considered complete. Your TIN is issued by your local country, may also referred to by a different name, such as a national tax ID or social security number.
- If you are not able to provide a TIN, you need to also complete the Explanation of Missing Tax Identifying Number form (PDF). These are examples of explanations that the IRS will accept:
  - My country of permanent residence does not issue foreign TINs.
  - I am not legally required to obtain a TIN. (UBS Financial Services preference).

- If you have a US Social Security Number, you must complete a W-9 form. Without this form, taxes could be withheld from any share sales, requiring you to seek a refund via your federal tax return. You can avoid this issue by completing the form as instructed on the brokers website. This is a one-time requirement.

How often I should log into my UBS account?

Managing your equity and brokerage accounts is your responsibility. Accenture does not manage your accounts in any way.

To prevent the risk of loss of your shares and/or any cash held in your account(s) through escheatment by government authorities, we recommend that you take one of the following actions at least twice a year:

1. Log into your account(s) at the company broker(s) to confirm your contact information
2. Call your company broker(s) to confirm your contact information; or
3. Send a letter or courier (requiring confirmation of receipt) to your company brokers(s) confirming your contact information.

Additionally, please be sure to contact Accenture with any updates to your permanent home address. Not only will this ensure you receive important Accenture mailings, but each week Accenture transmits your current mailing address to company brokers to help keep your contact details current. You are responsible for providing updates to your personal email address and phone number directly to UBS Financial Services, as that information is not sent by Accenture.

To ensure appropriate tax withholding on any share transactions, be sure to check to see if you have a current tax form on file. A W-8BEN form is considered current for the calendar year it was filed and for the following three years.

Throughout the year, we recommend accessing your brokerage account at least monthly to check for alerts and to monitor share value. Also, you should log on to your account within a week of the following events:

- Share purchase
- Dividend payment
- Address change:
  - Go to Workday for Accenture
  - Click your profile picture (upper right corner) on your Workday homepage and select View Profile
  - Then select Actions > Personal Data > Change My Home Contact Information.
- Personnel number change
- Country transfer.

Finally, you will need to access your brokerage account during tax season to retrieve tax reporting documents.

What are the charges/fees for transactions in my UBS account?

A current list of SEC and broker fees is available on the UBS site. To view this list, log on to the site and select The Restricted Units Library from the Quick Links dropdown box.

No fees apply if you decide to transfer any or all of your released shares to another brokerage company or account. Additional information is available on the UBS Financial Services Inc. website. However, in China, a PRC National may not transfer shares to another brokerage account due to local legal restrictions.

Who do I contact with questions about my home address on file at UBS?

UBS Financial Services Inc. uses name and address information supplied by Accenture, so it is important that the information in the Accenture global personnel system (Workday) is up to date. Active employees may verify/update your address:

- Go to myHoldings and click on your name.
- If the address listed is accurate, you have no further actions.
- If your address is incorrect, log onto https://workday.accenture.com, click on your profile picture on the top right corner, and then select Contact from the left navigation. There you will have the option to edit your own permanent home address.
- Accenture will then update your address with UBS accordingly.

You are responsible for providing updates to your personal email address and phone number directly to UBS Financial Services, as that information is not sent by Accenture.

It is important to note that you may see differences in your home address formatting at the broker due to system differences. You may see:

- Your name or address truncated, modified, or inaccurate on your broker account. Please contact the UBS Financial Services call center to ensure they update before you execute a trade.
- In many countries, employees will see a numeric code listed in your address, instead of the street address listed in Workday and on myHoldings. The UBS systems rely upon a region/state/province code rather than a spelled out name. Whether UBS uses a numeric or an alphabetic code is country dependent. The universe of possible code values is specified by the International Standards Organization ("ISO") allowing codes to be recognized by postal authorities world-wide. Accenture does not have an internal resource to learn more on this topic, however, there are online public sources that explain ISO country and region coding in greater detail. One available source can be review here: ISO 3166 - Wikipedia.
- The numeric formatting in the UBS system is therefore expected, and not an error that needs to be corrected by Accenture.

- If you need to contact the UBS call center to validate your address or conduct a trade, please ensure you are very clear that you are trying to validate the ISO codes and that you are not concerned about the address on file at Accenture.

Former employees may email global.alumni.ops@accenture.com for assistance with updating your address in our personnel system.
Please note that your Accenture/company email will remain the primary email address on your brokerage account even after you have left the company. Shareholders may add an optional secondary email address directly on the UBS website.
